Of all employee benefits, health care protection is the one most often used. And Blue Cross and Blue Shield are the preferred protection.

They offer the best value to employers and to employees. So don't let anyone talk you out of it.

Your administrative costs are less because in just about every case, Blue Cross and Blue Shield process claims directly with hospitals and physicians. Your personnel department doesn't become an insurance claims office.

Your employees get maximum protection because Blue Cross and Blue Shield consistently pay more benefits for the premium dollars taken in.

We're a service organization. At the service of any employer who wants to make the most of his employee benefit dollar. We'll package with anybody. Isn't that about what you'd expect from the leaders in health care protection?

SALVATORE CAMELIO

PRESIDENT

In his 1971 Labor Day message, President Camelio expressed concern over the potential effects of the wage-price freeze ordered by President Nixon on August 15.

Labor day, 1971, happens to come exactly twenty-two days after President Nixon announced a new economic policy which has stirred reverberations throughout the entire free world.

Labor Day is a day on which the workers of America — particularly the members of our trade unions — pause to celebrate. It is a day for an honest appraisal of the accomplishments of the American labor movement in the past and of its anticipations for the future.

The state of the American economy in the past few years gave the American working men and women very little reason for celebration. Job security was threatened by an ever increasing rate of unemployment. Inflation and excessive taxation left little room for anticipation of a better life in the years ahead.

On this Labor Day of 1971, it would appear that the promise of drastic changes in the economic policies of the federal government, as enunciated by President Nixon on August 15 when he announced his wage-price freeze program, only leaves us facing a big question mark as to prosperity and economic security in the years ahead.

We might be inclined to applaud that part of his program that calls for stabilization of the American dollar abroad and which — at long last — would put a curb on the unfair competition of foreign imports, which in the last decade has destroyed hundreds of thousands of American jobs. But before we cheer too loudly, it would be wise to wait and see just what kind of retaliation the affected foreign countries will dream up.

As for the wage-price freeze affecting the American people, it is so full of inequities that we have to concur with the labor leader who said: "The working man gets it in the neck again."

A program which indiscriminately freezes wages and puts no ceiling on profits and interest rates is certainly not designed for equality of sacrifice.

It is true that organized labor demanded that a wage-price freeze be imposed to bring the national economy back to somewhere near normal — but when the whole burden of sacrifice is placed on the shoulders of the working man, while the corporations, the banks and other vested interests are left to realize bigger profits, we cannot approve or support the wage-price freeze.

I would ask all of our members to think of contacting their respective representatives in Congress and urge them to remove all the inequities before putting their stamp of approval on President Nixon's new economic policy.

As I see it, on this Labor Day of 1971, the American workers have even less reason for optimism than they had last year or the year before.

JAMES P. LOUGHLIN

SECRETARY-TREASURER

In his 1971 Labor Day message, Secretary-Treasurer Loughlin takes a look at the structure American labor has been building and finds it in need of repair.

Every Labor Day the American working people take some time out to look back at what they have done to find some reason for their celebrations — and at the same time to examine the condition of the structure they have been building for a better life in the years ahead.

There are many, many things that the American workers have done in the past of which they have every right to be proud — and which gives them ample reason to celebrate.

On this Labor Day of 1971, I would like to ask you to examine, a little more closely, the condition of the structure we have been building — particularly its condition here in Massachusetts.

First, let me remind everyone that the American working people were pushed into a fighting mood in the late Twenties and the early Thirties by a depression. Out of a working force of some forty-five million, nearly thirteen million people were unemployed.

It was then, only through political action and by electing real friends of labor to the law-making bodies of the land, could they hope to achieve their objective of economic justice and social security.

It was then they worked hard at the polls to elect Franklin D. Roosevelt — who, in the first 100 days of his Administration, laid the foundation upon which strong trade unions would be built . . . a labor movement that would see him re-elected four consecutive times and that would help him bring about the drastic economic and social changes which eventually made the American worker the envy of the entire world.

The working people have taken it for granted that their best chance to elect friends is to look for them in the ranks of the Democratic party. In the election of 1970, we spent a lot of money and rallied thousands of volunteers to help the Democrats win more seats in both branches of the Massachusetts General Court.

At the opening of the 1971 session of this Legislature, we were assured that our legislative program — containing 18 measures calling for urgently needed changes in our Workmen's Compensation Act — would have top priority and that roll calls on every bill would tell us exactly how many friends we have on Beacon Hill.

We had a roll call on our "Lockout" bill in the Senate in April and found that we did not have enough friends in that chamber to get this important bill enacted.

Since then — while the Legislature managed to increase our taxes by another $350 million — our legislative program has been gathering dust in committees.

So, when we look closely at the condition of the structure we have build, we find it badly in need of repair. And when we come to our next Labor Day, in 1972 — which will be in the middle of another election campaign — I hope that we have sense enough to make some repairs by getting rid of those so-called friends, who have given us nothing but lip-service.

These recent installations represent an important new trend — more and more commercial, institutional and industrial establishments are turning to modern electric heating systems. The basic reasons are many, and as various as the types of problems encountered. Manufacturers of precision equipment and electronic devices depend on its close control of humidity and dust. Planners of schools choose it for low maintenance, churches for quiet, motels for efficiency. Ease of installation, flexibility, and remarkable cleanliness are other prime considerations. Consultants from your investor-owned electric utility will gladly supply full information on the many modern approaches to heating (and cooling) with electricity.

Condensed From The Executive Officers' Report

TO THE OFFICERS AND DELEGATES TO THE FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE MASSACHUSETTS STATE LABOR COUNCIL, AFL — CIO.

We are convening for our Fourteenth Annual Convention facing, not only a great challenge to the principle of economic justice for which the American labor movement stands, but also a grave threat to a democratic system upon which the very security of the entire nation rests.

The new economic policies enunciated by President Nixon on August 15 contained a 90-day wage-price freeze so filled with inequities, that labor leaders throughout the country were forced to rise in protest. AFL-CIO President George Meany in a 15-minute Labor Day message called it an unequitable wage-price freeze "which unfairly requires workers to assume the major burden."

Just a short time before the President made his announcement of the wage-price freeze, in an article in the Federationist, Meany had described the state of the American economy as "just plain lousy", outlining the dimensions of the problem as follows: five million workers unemployed; hundreds of thousands have exhausted their unemployment compensation; the cost of living is going up at an annual rate of about 5.5 percent; in three years a half-million American jobs have been lost because of outmoded foreign trade policies; the number of people who live in poverty has grown to over 25 million; the unemployment rate among young returning GIs is over 13 percent; the unemployment rate among blacks is 10 percent and among teen-agers 17 percent; and among construction workers, unemployment is over 10 percent.

"We are just plain fed up," said Meany, and added, "We want to put America back to work, reverse the destructive forces undermining the social stability of this nation, remind the government of its obligation, its responsibility, its duty."

"We insist on action. But in the light of experience, we see little prospect of constructive action from the Administration now in the White House."

"So we are looking to Congress for programs to get this nation moving again. This Congress and its predecessor have been constructive. They haven't done as much as they should, they haven't over-ridden as many ill-considered presidential vetoes as they should -- but Congress has been a great deal more constructive than the Executive Branch."

In his message on Labor Day, Meany also criticized the announced border tax on some imports as a temporary stopgap at best, adding that "a border tax will do very little to meet the major foreign trade problem created by the U. S.-based multi-national corporations and international banks, which have accounted for most of the export of American jobs."

On this very serious current state of international trade, President I.W. Abel of the Industrial Union Department had this to say:

"Our nation will soon become a permanent debtor in the world market if present U. S. import-export trends continue. Our imports of high-technology goods -- the finished manufactures that have traditionally made up the best-paying of our exports -- are pyramiding. We are reaching the point where we will no longer be selling more than we buy outside our own borders."

THE MASSACHUSETTS STATE LABOR COUNCIL launched its 1971 program of direct discussion of its legislative aims with concerned legislators at a luncheon special meeting held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel on January 26. Shown here at the meeting (starting on the left) are Senator James R. McIntyre; Senator Allan R. McKinnon; Jack Hestor, Adm. Aide to Senate Pres. Harrington; Senator Mario Umana; Rep. Anthony J. Scalli; Legislative Director James A. Broyer; Executive Vice President Daniel F. Murray; House Speaker David Bartley; President Salvatore Camelio; Senate President Kevin Harrington; Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin; Legislative Consultant Albert G. Clifton; COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan; Rep. Thomas McGee; and Rep. George Sacco.

STATE LABOR COUNCIL PRESIDENT SALVATORE CAMELIO is shown here addressing a breakfast legislative meeting sponsored by the Greater Boston Labor Council in cooperation with the COPE Department of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, on February 11. Seventeen legislators in the Greater Boston area attended the breakfast. Seated next to the speaker (On the right) are Executive Secretary Lawrence Sullivan of the Greater Boston Labor Council and Council President Valentine Murphy. Seated on the left is Fred Ramsay, an official of the Boston Council and a Vice President on the Massachusetts State Labor Council.

"When this happens, the results will include, (1) inability to finance many of our foreign assistance commitments; (2) loss of an important source of highly skilled, well-paying jobs; and (3) most importantly, loss of control over our own economic destiny."

On August 26, speaking for the officers and members of this Council, President Camelio issued a statement in support of the national AFL-CIO's position on the Administration's new economic policies.

"We cannot go along," said Camelio, "with a program which freezes wages and allows profits and interest rates to run wild. All kinds of exemptions in the program will allow fluctuations in the prices of many of the things you buy -- and yet the freeze on wages is so absolute as to be ridiculous in many instances."

He cited as an example, a man hired two years ago at $2.00 per hour with the understanding that his hourly rate would go to $2.50 after a year and to $3.00 after the second year. Since the employer's costs are predicated on these stepped up hourly rates of pay, what actually happens if this employee's pay is frozen at $2.50 an hour is that you are actually reducing his real wage by fifty cents an hour and putting that fifty cents in the pockets of his employer.

"Another questionable part of the Nixon program," said Camelio, "is the 10 percent tax credit handed out to the corporation supposedly for the purpose of giving them an incentive to expand production facilities. How in the name of common sense can you expect any immediate need for expansion, when 25 percent of our present capacity is idle?"

"The Massachusetts State Labor Council," Camelio concluded, "stands unanimously opposed to President Nixon's wage-price freeze as presently formulated and calls upon the members of Congress to remove all inequities from the program before putting their stamp of approval on the package received from the White House."

At the time this is being written Congress has returned to Capitol Hill and is faced with the responsibility of acting on the Administration's new policy. As you read this in Convention, developments not recorded here have taken place,-- but it is easily predictable from this vantage point that the coming year will be filled with greater challenges than organized labor has had to face for many decades.

In other areas, the current Congress -- before going on its summer vacation in August -- had spent, or wasted, much time in trying to reassert its position in relation to the Executive Branch, particularly on the question of which branch of the government has the constitutional right to make or stop wars. Much time was also spent by individual members of the Democratic majority of Congress in grooming themselves as presidential timber for the 1972 election. Much major domestic legislation was as a result, sadly neglected.

A national health security program had the highest priority in the 92nd Congress, but at this writing the AFL-CIO-supported bill introduced by Representatives Martha W. Griffiths of Michigan and James Corman of California and Senators Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and William B. Saxbe of Ohio is still awaiting action. Much has still to be done on creating new jobs, a higher minimum wage, new housing, improved Social Security, trade legislation, welfare reform and consumer protection.

IN THE STATE

Here at the state level, we have felt the impact of the national deterioration of the economy. The unemployment rate in Massachusetts has consistently been above the national average and the loss of jobs through plant closings has been unprecedented, particularly in the shoe industry. The failure of the Nixon original "game plan" has had such a severe effect on Massachusetts that national

JOHN F. HENNING, SECRETARY-TREASURER of the California State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, one of the principal speakers at the April 23rd Seminar, is shown here with President Salvatore Camelio and COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan.

QUINN opening speaking program at the April 23rd Seminar sponsored by the Massachusetts State Labor Council's Committee on Education for an in-depth discussion of the seriousness of increasing unemployment in America. Seated is Council's President Salvatore Camelio. Standing at the right, looking over the day's program, are COPE and Education Director John A. Callahan and Joseph P. attention focussed on the fact, that thousands of technicians and engineers employed along Route 128 were forced to join the ranks of the unemployed.

Our Convention last year adjourned in the midst of an important election campaign. A leaflet distributed at the Convention had strongly made the point that "this year's election is nothing less than a referendum vote on the Nixon-Agnew Administration."

In terms of financial assistance and physical participation, the Mass. State Labor Council's COPE Department conducted an intensive election campaign throughout the state. Although its endorsed candidate for the Governorship was defeated, the Massachusetts congressional delegation remained 8 to 4 Democratic and in the Massachusetts General Court Democrats increased their strength to 30 to 10 in the Senate and 178 to 62 in the House.

The pace on Beacon Hill in Boston followed pretty closely the pattern set by Capitol Hill in Washington. The Massachusetts State Labor Council filed a total of forty-six bills. Nineteen of these bills called for changes in the Workmen's Compensation Act -- changes not only to improve the benefit structure under the Act but also, to correct the inadequate provisions which have allowed a backlog of more than 7,000 cases waiting to be heard by the Industrial Accident Board, some of them for several years.

One thing we must say is, that our Committee on Workmen's Compensation, under the Chairmanship of Ronald Orcutt of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, in Quincy, has met more times and has done more work to bring about the enactment of these bills, than has been done by any Committee at any time, in the past. They have worked from the beginning of the year with President Salvatore Camelio and other officials of the Council to get action in the Legislature.

The officers of the Council launched into action early after our last Convention, on matters that would come before the General Court. On November 25, 1970, with members of our Committee on Taxation, we had a meeting with members of the Special Commission to Develop a Master Tax Plan and Program for Taxation Within the Commonwealth to discuss an interim report outlining tentative proposals for a Master Tax Plan. Sen. George V. Kenneally, Jr., Chairman of the Commission, Rep. Frederick W. Schlosstein, Jr., a member, and Robert H. McClain, Jr., its Executive Director, were on hand to explain the proposals and answer questions.

During the meeting, President Camelio pointed out that there was no mention of taxes on rental income in the Commission's interim report and the wisdom of tampering with the sales tax, mentioned in the report, was questioned. The members of the Commission countered that all criticism and suggestions made at meetings such as that one would be taken under consideration in the drafting of the PICTURE SHOWS SENATOR HUBERT H. HUMPHREY of Minnesota at the conclusion of his speech at the luncheon of the Fourth Biennial Convention of the Massachusetts State Industrial Union Council, AFL-CIO, at the Hotel Bradford on April 30. final report. One proposal in the interim report that we could unanimously agree on, was that which would have limited the percentage to the total tax burden from property taxes to 42%.

The Master Tax Plan somehow got lost in the shuffle during the see-saw battle, between the Executive and the Legislative on how much more could be siphoned out of the pockets of the long-suffering taxpayers of Massachusetts -- and while we narrowly escaped a boost in the sales tax, the property owners of the Commonwealth will be unable to keep the grasping fingers of tax collectors from digging deeper into their pockets.

After the start of the legislative year, we arranged for direct confrontations with concerned members of the Legislature for discussions of our legislative program. The first was held on January 26 at the Statler-Hilton Hotel. Another, held at the Parker House on February 11, was co-sponsored by our COPE Department and the Greater Boston Central Labor Council. Throughout the year, other central labor bodies in conjunction with our COPE and Legislative Departments held similar meetings for discussions with legislators from their respective areas.

It should be noted also that our legislative functions as a Council, involves more than lobbying for the enactment of our legislative proposals. As early as March, we had already had to register our opposition to 45 anti-labor measures with the prospect at that time that at least another 120 such bills would have to be fought before the year was out.

Another thing that belongs under our activities on Beacon Hill, is the fact that we took action on the Governor's choice of labor representatives to serve on the Meat and Poultry Advisory Board as set up under Chapter 891 of the General Laws. The Act specifically calls for appointment by the Governor of two members named by the Massachusetts State Labor Council. The Council had sent in the names of Executive Vice President Joseph A. Sullivan and Vice President Rexford Weng, both connected with the Meatcutters union, but they were bypassed by the Governor. The officers of the Council later met with the Governor on the matter and sought an opinion from the Attorney General's office.

Another action taken by the Council at its March meeting, was the position that state laws protecting women in heavy industries -- in relation to hours of work, meal periods, night work, weight lifting and seating -- could not be cancelled out by virtue of the new federal law giving women equal rights. As pointed out by AFL-CIO Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller, while these state laws may "not be of great importance to women in business and professional occupations, they are essential safeguards for the welfare of working women."

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin and Executive Vice President were in Washington last November to represent the Massachusetts State Labor Council during the two-day Senate debate on the far-reaching occupational safety bill, which has now established federal supervision over safety conditions wherever workers are employed. At the April meeting of the Council this year, Edward Garvin, a representative of Workplace Standards Administration of the U. S. Department of Labor, addressed the Council members on the provisions of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970.

On January 14, Secretary-Treasurer Loughlin addressed a Luncheon Meeting of the M. I. T. Club of Boston, where he pointed out that the leaders of the American labor movement, as well as the college-educated men and women who are responsible for the tremendous advances made in technology and in the sciences during the Twentieth Century, are dedicating their lives to "the proposition of making this a better world in which we can all live."

He then noted, that while much progress has been made in making it easier to live and to work, "some of the greatest discoveries of modern science have been transformed into instruments of death and destruction." We have, he said, created an insufferable condition of air and water pollution. "And while we boast of being highly civilized," he added, "we are still unable to prevent or to stop wars. We are still fighting against racial discrimination, unemployment and slums. We are still faced with widespread poverty and ignorance. We are still unable to overcome forces which contribute to poor health, moral delinquency, and the breaking up of family life."

In the final analysis, Loughlin concluded, everyone must go through the school of experience -- and "it is from the lessons learned in this school that the world must find the solutions to its problems. Judging from the progress we have made in the Twentieth Century, I am sure we will derive some benefits from the harsh lessons we are being taught today."

This was one example of how your officers answered all requests for speakers to talk on subjects affecting working people. Among the major events of the year there was the April 23rd Seminar entitled "After The War -- Then What?" It was probably one of the most important conferences sponsored by any state council in many years. It was an effort on the part of the labor movement in Massachusetts to focus attention on a very serious problem that will have to be faced in the not too distant future. The problem of converting from a war-time or defense-oriented economy to a lasting peace-time economy

During the year, we have continued to lend our efforts to such programs as our own Scholarship Program, the Harvard Trade Union Program, the National Essay Contest on Employment of the Physically Handicapped, the Union Counseling Courses conducted in cooperation with the various United Funds and Community Chests, and many others.

It should be quite apparent to everyone, that because of the sadly deteriorating economic condition of the country, and of the tragic helplessness or gross indifference of many whom the people have empowered to prevent these conditions, the demands upon your Council and its officers have been far greater than in normal years. We have worked hard to meet the obligations of the offices to which you have elected us and we sincerely thank all who have cooperated with us in our efforts to make the labor movement in Massachusetts a fighting and a vital force for the good, not only of the members of our affiliated unions, but of all the working people of our Commonwealth.

PICTURE SHOWS PART OF GROUP of more than fifty people at November 9 Parker House meeting where organized labor in Massachusetts took definite steps to achieve simple justice for workers who become disabled in industrial accidents. Members of the Council and members of the Council's Committee on Workmen's Compensation spent more than four hours with members of the Industrial Accident Board and several lawyers who specialize in workmen's compensation cases discussing badly needed changes in the law to reduce long delays which in many cases precede the start of payments to injured workers and realistic improvements in the benefit structure of the Act. Also participating in the meeting was James O'Brien, Assistant Director of the National AFL-CIO's Department of Social Security.

ILLUSTRATING THE $15,200,000 GOAL of the 1971-72 Massachusetts Bay United Fund Campaign are, from left, Kenneth I. Guscott, president of Ken Guscott Associates, management consultants; Mrs. Helen T. O'Donnell, president of Local 711, Retail Clerks International Association and vice president of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO; William S. Brewster, board chairman of the USM Corporation and the MBUF campaign chairman; and Charles Adams, chairman of the Raytheon Company and president of the Massachusetts Bay United Fund. All are members of the MBUF Executive Committee, which approved the goal for the campaign.

After we teach our students everything about money, we teach them that money isn't everything.

In today's complex society, financial reward is just not enough. Today's truly successful leader in industry, government or education must have not only the technical knowledge but also the ability to communicate as well as to comprehend.

Bentley College, a leader in the field of accounting and financial education, now offers several routes to success with its expanded curriculum. Courses of study leading to the B.S. degree in accounting, management, business administration, economics, business education, finance, public administration, computer science and communication, plus B.A. programs in various combinations from the humanities and social science divisions, provide a balance of cultural and technical education for personal and professional competence.

Flexible 2-year and 4-year programs, or combination of Day and Evening Divisions offerings, are tailored to the schedules and budgets of men and women seeking top quality education.

Students now being accepted for Fall 1971 or Spring 1972. Transfer students are encouraged to apply. Modern, attractive residence facilities at our new Waltham campus.

For more information call or write the Dean of Admissions, Bentley College—Dept. A, Beaver and Forest Streets, Waltham, Mass. 02154. (617) 891-2244.

WHY WORKERS UNITE

In our time, with its great concentrations of wealth and industry, vast powers are exercised by their possessors. The very concentration and possession are potent organization. Unless the workers had combined in union's of labor, their conditions today would be such as to shock the mind.

That any hope for material improvement, moral advancement or higher ethical consideration is possible without the organization of labor few now seriously believe. Yet when that which we call "the labor question" is discussed, there are not many who will undertake to ascertain the laborers' side of it.

The trade union demands a comprehensive reduction in the hours of labor so as to afford the workers sufficient leisure in which to cultivate their mental and moral faculties. It demands better homes, better surrounding, better opportunities for the cultivation of the higher and nobler functions of human activity. Asking nothing but what is just for ourselves, we impose no injustice upon others.

The trade union cultivates self-respect, manhood and character. Its influence for good encompasses the whole human family. It seeks systematically to attain better relations between the employers and employed. It compels a higher ethical consideration for the rights of all.

As an individual gains strength by the exercise of natural functions, so do the laborers gain strength in proportion as they assert and manfully stand for their rights, and even make temporary sacrifices in order to attain them.

— SAMUEL GOMPERS

Collective bargaining! now ... Collective buying!

Nine years ago UBS created its first collective buying plan. It covered only automobiles at the time. Combining the enormous purchasing power of both unions and government employees, this collective buying plan offered its members a simple, easy, proven way of obtaining any make of automobile at a saving of hundreds of dollars per car.

The acceptance of collective buying was immediate . . . and so enthusiastic that UBS is now the largest buying service of its kind on the North American continent.

Today UBS not only provides new cars at substantial savings, but the same kind of savings on practically every household appliance made: on carpeting and many other major items for the home. Substantial savings even for group and charter travel.

In one capacity or another UBS is now serving every major union, industrial and commercial institution and/or organization in both the United States and Canada.

UBS is unique in many ways. For one—it costs nothing to join. There are no membership fees, no minimum purchasing requirements, no charges of any sort. Its sole function is to utilize its collective buying plan to save you money.

UBS is a service that every union leader should make available to his members. And it's as simple as writing a postcard. For complete information, write: or phone UNITED BUYING SERVICE of MASSACHUSETTS INC. 73 TREMONT STREET, BOSTON MASS. 02108 Telephone (617) 723-6340
